

METROPOLIS

JAPAN TODAY | METROPOLIS | CLASSIFIEDS | PERSONALS | JOBS

Issue Index

Original Features

Features

Mini Features

Cultural Features

Life in Japan

Big in Japan

Rant & Rave

Cars & Bikes

Health & Beauty

Interiors

Practical

Jobfinder

Money Talks

Tokyo Tech

Web Watch

Food & Drink

Food & Drink

Restaurant Reviews

Bar Reviews

Word of Mouth

Travel

Travel Features

Japan Travel

International Travel

Travelogue

Style

Art

Artifacts

Fashion

Tokyo Talk

In Store

Buyline

Music

Japan Beat

CD Reviews

In Person

Concerts

Clubbing

BIG IN JAPAN

Hachiko

Shibuya is known today as a popular gathering point for Tokyo' young people. But long before loose socks and sandals with three-inch soles, before Tower Records and 109, Shibuya had another claim to fame: Hachiko.

The year was 1925. Every morning, Professor Ueno Eizaburo walked to Shibuya station accompanied by his loyal dog, Hachi, nicknamed Hachiko. Hachiko didn't accompany his master to his teaching job at the Imperial University (now known as Tokyo University), but when Professor Ueno returned every day at 3pm, the dog was always at the station waiting for him. However, on May 21 of that year, Ueno died of a stroke while at the university. Hachiko went to Shibuya as always to meet his master, but 3 o'clock came and went, and the professor didn't arrive. So Hachiko waited. And waited.

The Akita must have known something was wrong, but nonetheless he returned to the station every day at 3 o'clock to meet the train. Soon people began to notice the loyal dog's trips made in vain to meet his master. Ueno's former gardener, the Shibuya stationmaster, and others began feeding Hachiko and giving him shelter. Word of his unaltered routine spread across the nation, and he was held up as a shining example of loyalty. People travelled to Shibuya simply to see Hachiko, feed him, and gently touch his head for luck.

The months turned to years, and still Hachiko returned to Shibuya station daily at 3pm, even as

► BIG IN JAPAN:

349: Toshinobu Kubota

First Japanese man of soul

348: Midori Ito

Ice skater

347: Tomohiro Hoshino

Paralyzed artist and poet

346: Tetsuko Kuroyanagi

UNICEF Goodwill Ambassador

344: Norika Fujiwara

The Japanese "It Girl"

343: Ikebana

Flowers kept alive

342: Hirotada Ootake

Author of "No One's Perfect"

341: Korean food

Hot and popular in Japan

340: Tsuyoshi Kunasagi

Pointy-faced SMAP member

339: Koji Ishizaka

Heavyweight veteran actor

338: Kokichi Mikimoto

Founder of Mikimoto Pearls

337: Warren Cromartie

The "Messiah" of the Yomiuri Giants

335: Bonsai

Japan's dwarfed trees in a pot

334: Salaryman Kintaro

New icon in Japanese pop culture

333: Nagare Hagiwara

Rugged Japanese actor

332: Noboru Takeshita

Kuromaku politician

331: Ihara Saikaku

Radical 17th century writer

330: Ikkokudo

Okinawan ventriloquist

329: Takashi Murakami

The centerpiece of artist

328: Hideki Toji

The Imperial Palace Gagaku Orchestra

327: Konoshiki

Japan's most feared and most successful wrestler

326: Tarepanda

The floppy panda of Japan

325: Suziki Ichiro

Orix Blue Wave right fielder

324: Jakucho Setouchi

Nun re-writes "The Tale of Genji"

323: Otohime

Helping women's bathroom etiquette

322: Dragon Ash

Hip-hop revolutionists

321: Kimiko Date

Tennis player

320: Kan Fukuhara

Flautist

319: Godzilla

Mutant dinosaur movie star

318: Thee Michelle Gun Elephant

Popular punk band

317: Ken Kutaragi

CEO of Sony Computer Entertainment

316: Masahiro Motoki

arthritis and aging took their toll. Finally, on March 7, 1934 - nearly ten years after last seeing Professor Ueno - the 12-year-old Akita was found dead on the same spot outside the station where he had spent so many hours waiting for his master.

Hachiko's death made the front pages of major Japanese newspapers. A day of mourning was declared. Contributions poured in from all over the country to memorialize the dog that had won the hearts of the nation. Sculptor Ando Teru was hired, with the money that had been contributed, to create a bronze statue of Hachiko. In April 1934 it was placed on the exact spot where Hachiko had waited for so long.

Within a few years, however, Japan was at war, and any available metal was melted down to make weapons. Not even Hachiko's statue was spared. After the war, in 1948, Ando's son Takeshi sculpted a new Hachiko - the statue that stands outside Shibuya station to this day.

This is not the only monument to chuken ("loyal dog") Hachiko to be found in Tokyo, however. Aoyama Cemetery contains a memorial to Hachiko on the site of Professor Ueno's grave. Some of Hachiko's bones are reportedly buried there, but in fact, Hachiko can still be seen, stuffed, in the National Science Museum northwest of Ueno station.

Back in Shibuya, Hachiko's statue sits in a noble pose, forever waiting for his master. His statue, appropriately, is the best-known landmark and meeting place in Shibuya, where hundreds of people every day sit and wait for their friends.

Tim Young

High-rising entertainer

315: Katada Kikuyu

Japan's premier female taiko player

314: Keizo Obuchi

Prime Minister

313: Booska

The big, orange bucktooth monster

312: Shizuyo Sato

Japanese martial arts master

311: Yujiro Ishihara

Actor, singer and Japanese icon

310: Saburo Kitajima

Japanese enka singer

309: Kaya Yamada

Japan's hippie god

308: L'Arc en Ciel

Japanese pop band

307: Shintaro Ishihara

Governor and author

306: Morita Akio

Sony co-founder

305: Miyazaki Hayao

Film producer

304: Sailor Moon

Girl's comic

303: Hachiko

Shibuya's loyal dog

302: Hayashi Chie

Japanese dancer

300: Kobayashi Sachiko

Enka singer

Issues 350 +

Issues 299-250

Issues 248/9-233